

LNG Bunkering Summit 2017

A Positive Story From The Oil Depression

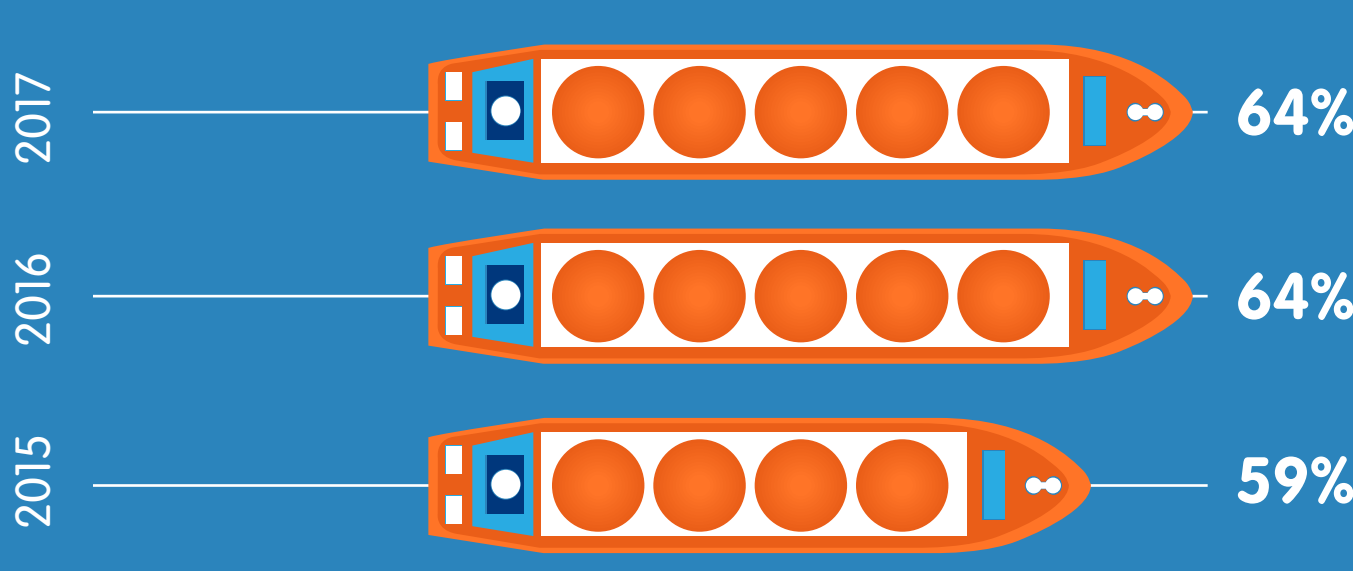

The protracted oil price depression has seen the contraction and retrogression of many fuel-dependent markets in the past 24 months. Bunkering with liquefied natural gas (LNG) has been one of those areas affected, by the drop in the conventional fuel for the maritime industry.

In this infographic, conducted with Oil & Gas IQ's burgeoning bunkering network, we can begin to paint a surprisingly encouraging picture of a sector that refuses to be blown off course by the worst oil price crash in living memory.

Do you feel LNG will become a widespread fuel for short-sea shipping?

Do you feel LNG will become a widespread fuel for deep-sea shipping?

Do you feel that LNG will become a widespread fuel for ships?

Will the current low oil price continuum be a hindrance to the expansion of LNG bunkering worldwide?

What is the most important aspect of decision making and adopting LNG as a fuel?

- Regulatory compliance
- Social responsibility
- Operational efficiency
- Profitability
- Ageing stock

What do you feel to be the greatest hurdle for LNG bunkering?

What do you feel to be the greatest hurdle for LNG bunkering?

Which region do you anticipate driving the bunkering market forward in 2017?

18% The market will not make any significant progress in 2017

What do you believe will help accelerate growth in the sector?

Now in its 5th year, the Annual LNG Bunkering Summit will unite global players from leading ports, LNG terminal operators, ship operators, ship owners, LNG suppliers, and LNG technology providers to develop strategic partnerships and common strategy to drive the LNG Bunkering market forward.

To join us from the 30th January - 1st February 2017 in Amsterdam, Netherlands, simply contact us on +44 (0) 20 7036 1300 or email enquire@iqpc.co.uk